

The Kunst-Werk-Stadt Konstanz is a student group from the University of Konstanz that focuses on art in and from Konstanz. It can be a new exhibition in the museum, the many beautiful buildings or that one strange thing you always cycle past. Art in the city is diverse. We want to look at and share this exploration with people who are interested in this adventure.

During our city tours our goal is to discover and discuss art together, look at a place through different eyes and draw attention to what is special about our city.

CITY!
Konstanz has about 85,000 inhabitants. You are one of them! Introduce and sketch yourself!

CREST!

You can find old crests on houses all over the old town. What would your crest look like?

The city of Konstanz is already a very old town. Many other cities in Germany were destroyed in attacks during the Second World War. But Konstanz was lucky because it is so close to Switzerland and nobody wanted to attack its Swiss neighbors by mistake. That is why the old buildings in Konstanz have survived. The oldest district of Konstanz is called Niederburg, where you can still find the ancient houses from the Middle Ages.

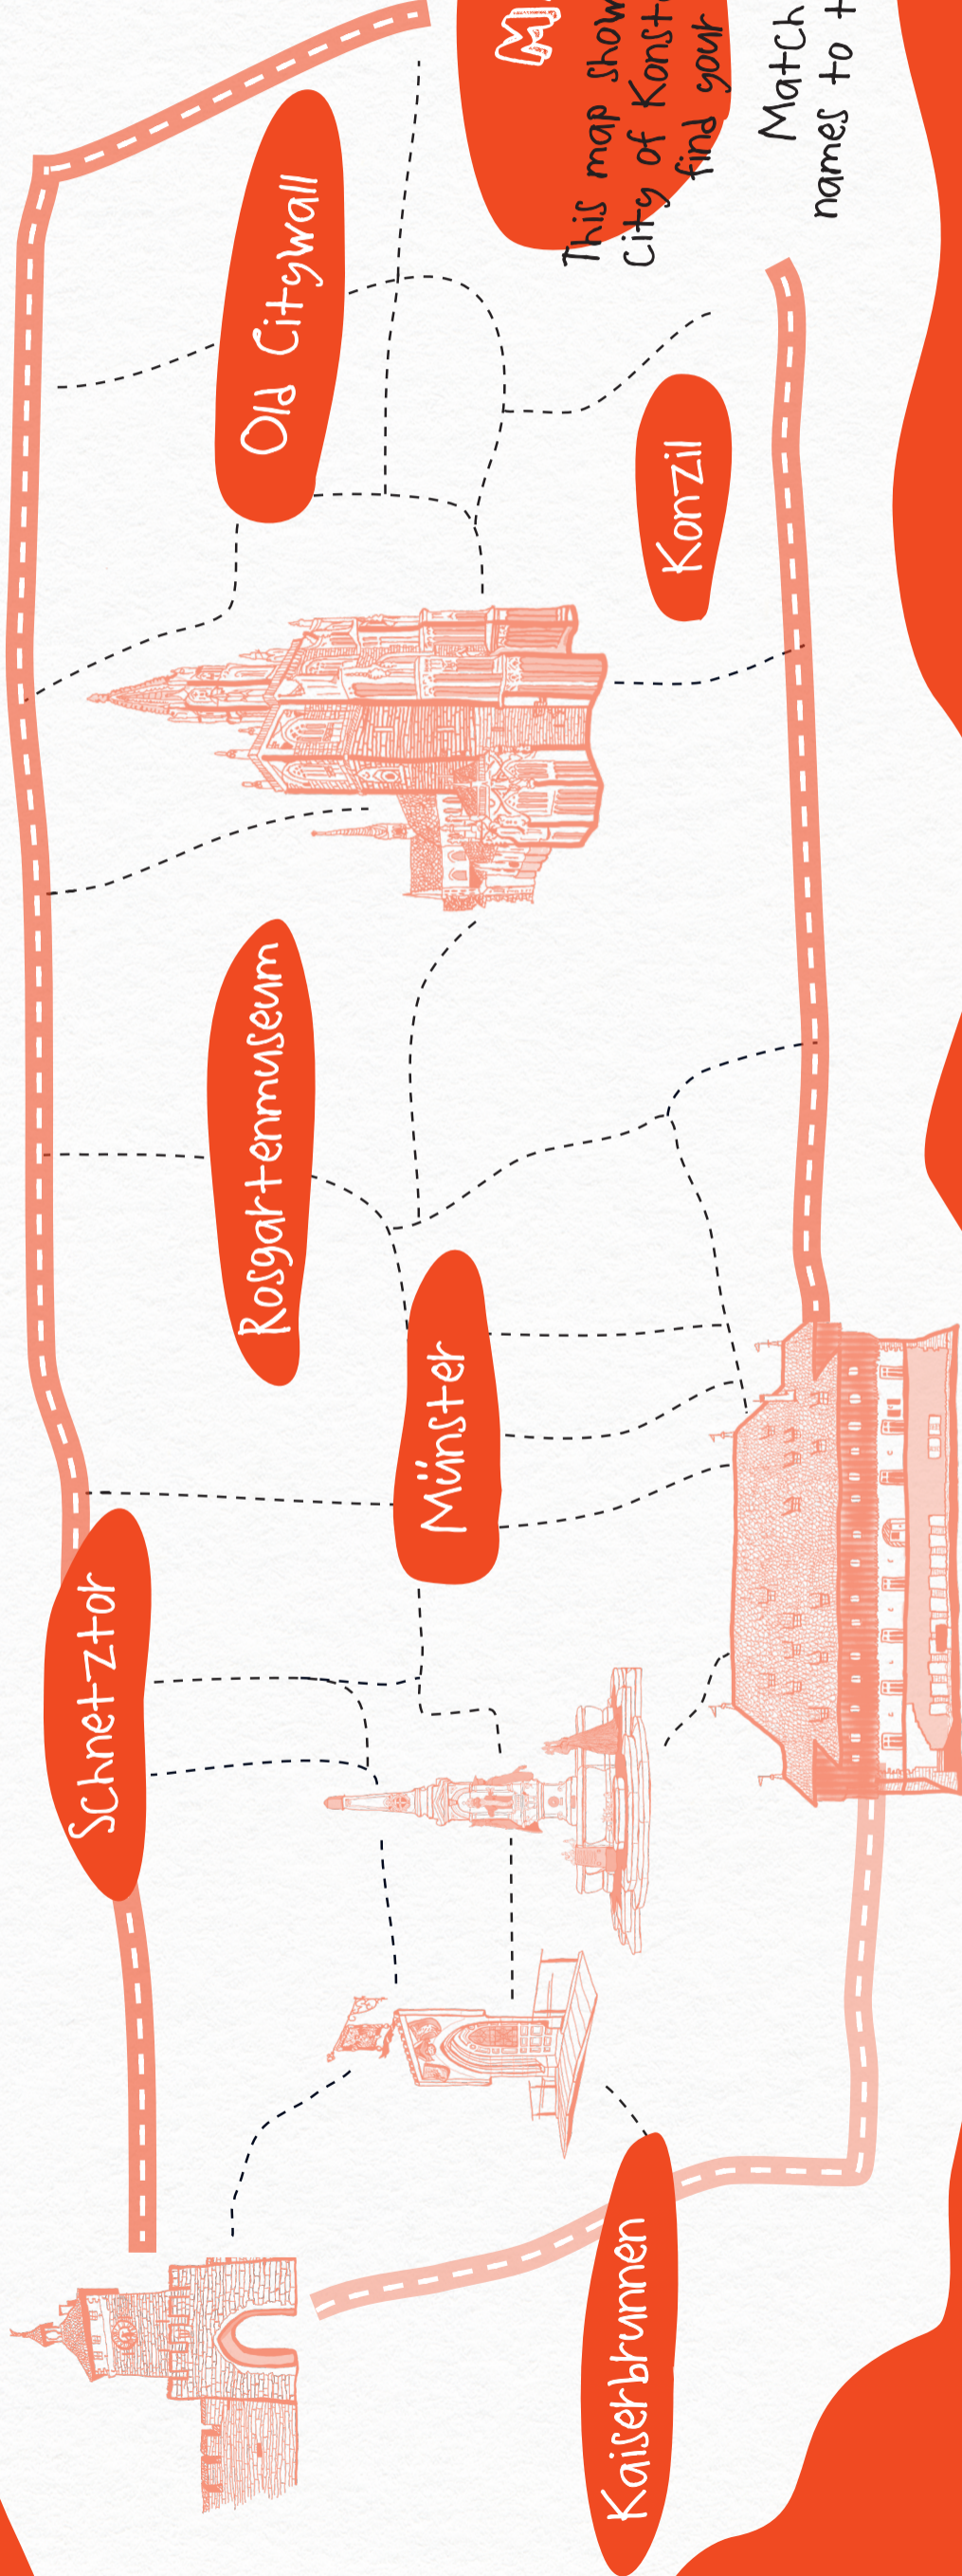

Many houses in Konstanz have a name written on their walls because previously houses were located by names and not by numbers or street names as they are today.

There is a house called Haus zum Pelikan on the Marktstätte with an ice cream shop inside. Can you find it? What is the name of the ice cream shop?

Hand-drawn horizontal lines for writing answers.

HOUSES!

What other house names did you discover along the way? Write them down!

MAP!

This map shows the modern city of Konstanz. Can you find your way around?

Match the places! names to the drawings!
